What is this Summit about?

Every sector is facing all-too-familiar leadership challenges. Each organisation has its own goals and pressures, but invariably the challenges facing the leaders of those organisations are similar – whether they be in the private or public sector, businesses or education.

Challenges such as sustainability, demographic change, social mobility, globalisation and the pace of technological advance face us all. This Summit presents a prime opportunity for you as leaders to explore together how organisations from all sectors are meeting these challenges.

What will you gain from this Summit?

You and your organisation will be able to:

- Identify the blend of leadership skills needed for the future
- Explore together how different and innovative models of leadership can be employed to develop our future leaders.

In addition you will have the opportunity to meet, share and compare approaches with a wealth of leaders from different sectors as you learn from each other's experiences.

Summit Format:

The programme will be participative and discussion-based. You can exchange views with colleagues and learn from one another; work together to select two key issues which leaders face and debate priorities for tackling them. These will be captured and shared with participants online after the Summit, so that leadership models to respond to them can be developed.

Who will join you?

Anyone with a remit involving leadership, from the private, public, educational and voluntary sectors including those in human resources, training and development, recruitment and retention, succession planning and line management.
